Howdy!

My name is Nachieli Silva and I'm a junior interdisciplinary studies major at Texas A&M University. I'm reaching out to you on behalf of a new women's organization on campus called Texas A&M Legacies. Legacies is a leadership organization that revolves around the pillars of Passion, Honor, and Community, and focuses on developing women and girls of all ages.

Legacies was established by a group of young women who all had the same idea – they all wanted to have an impact at Texas A&M, give back to our community, and encourage other women. In order to make their dreams a reality, they decided to form a new women's organization. We are striving to create a legacy of service and leadership through the empowerment of women both within the TAMU student body and Bryan-College Station community, in keeping with TAMU's core values of service and leadership. We set ourselves apart from other current women's organizations in two main ways:

- Serving others through mentoring younger girls and collaborating with women in the community in ways including (but not limited to) a sustained mentorship program at local high schools, spending time with women in retirement communities, and volunteering with Aggieland Pregnancy Outreach.
- Planning opportunities to encourage and allow leadership development, including coprogramming with existing organizations (smaller events) and the organizing of a women's leadership conference on campus (major event).

We want all of our members to feel empowered to express themselves and to encourage other women to do the same. With that in mind, we hold all of our members to high standards, and all of the women in Legacies are called to represent our organization and university in the most remarkable way. Legacies is a women's leadership organization that, through personal development, philanthropy, and community-building efforts, seeks to unite and encourage passionate female leaders.

We have many long-term goals for Legacies – funding scholarships for future female students to A&M, hosting a women's leadership conference for high school, college, and adult women, and maybe even inspiring other organizations similar to Legacies at neighboring schools. Our goal is above all to encourage women leaders with giving hearts, and we believe that as Aggies, we have a strong basis on which to build this vision.

However, as a new organization, we are very limited in funding, and we'd like to humbly ask for your support. While we are working on organizing fundraising opportunities, these have limited return and we have big dreams. We know we have to start small, but with your support, we can begin touching the lives of Aggie women in a more impactful way even sooner. Any donation that you would be able to make would be an investment in the future of Aggie women, and we would be more than appreciative. If you are unable to make a donation, please consider passing the word of Legacies on to any daughters, nieces, neighbors, or any young women who plan on/are currently attending Texas A&M.

We are very grateful for the many ways in which you already support Aggies and would like to thank you for any support or advice that you Fightin' Texas Aggie Moms are able to extend to us.

Sincerely,

Nachieli Silva
